KUALA LUMPUR: University graduates need to acquire language skill, to compete on the international job market, says Minister of International Trade and Industry Datuk Seri Mustapa Mohamed. He said, there were many Malaysian companies operating in other countries and need workers with a variety of skills. “Not only do we need to produce skilled workers, but we also need those with foreign language abilities. Today, several languages are being used on the international level. “Our students thus need to be skilled in these languages to be employed both in Malaysia and overseas,” he said, after officiating the International Islamic University Malaysia (IIUM) Sector Focus Career Fair 2012 (SFCF 2012) yesterday. The SFCF 2012 is a three-day event aimed at creating awareness of career choices available. — Bernama
